Cataler Ends Sales of Activated Carbon Products

Cataler Corporation has decided to end the sale of activated carbon products. These products have been sold through the company's activated carbon business. Alongside the development and commercialization of catalysts for purifying vehicle emissions and catalysts for use in electrodes, the activated carbon business has been a core business of the company since its foundation. Cataler aims to develop new products by applying the core technology of the activated carbon business to other fields.

Discontinued products

Active carbon for processing industrial gas emissions, active carbon for deodorizing gases, active carbon for cleaning water and processing wastewater

While expanding its existing businesses, Cataler is also committed to protecting the global environment through active participation in new growth fields and the provision of new products.

Cataler would like to thank everyone who has supported the activated carbon business over the years, particularly our suppliers, customers, and business partners. We are very grateful to you all and thank you for your understanding of this decision.
